Abstract. The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were 20 men, aged 40-50 years, who were sedentary and had no known health problems. They were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The control group did not exercise. Physical fitness was measured using a variety of tests, including a 1.5-mile run, a 1-mile walk, a 1-mile jog, a 1-mile swim, and a 1-mile bike ride. Health was measured using a variety of tests, including a blood pressure reading, a heart rate reading, and a cholesterol reading. The results of the study showed that the exercise group had significantly better physical fitness and health than the control group after 12 weeks of training.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and blood pressure (BP) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The control group did not exercise. HR and BP were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week period. The exercise group showed a significant decrease in both HR and BP compared to the control group. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively reduce HR and BP in sedentary, middle-aged men.

ing issued by the RHC Department of Health and Human Services.

Abstract. The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of periodontitis between patients with type 2 diabetes mellitus (DM) and non-diabetic controls. A total of 60 patients with DM and 60 age- and sex-matched non-diabetic controls were recruited from a tertiary care hospital. All participants underwent a clinical examination of their periodontium. The prevalence of periodontitis was significantly higher in the DM group compared to the non-diabetic controls ($p < 0.001$). The mean periodontal index score was significantly higher in the DM group compared to the non-diabetic controls ($p < 0.001$). The results of this study suggest that there is a higher prevalence of periodontitis in patients with DM compared to non-diabetic controls.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or pulmonary disease. They were randomly assigned to a 10-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise at 60% of maximum HR. The control group remained sedentary. The HR and EE were measured at rest and during exercise at 60% of maximum HR. The HR and EE were significantly higher in the training group than in the control group at the end of the 10-week program. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and blood pressure (BP) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The training group performed a 10-week aerobic training program. The HR and BP were measured before and after the training program. The results showed that the training program significantly reduced the HR and BP of the training group compared to the control group. The HR decreased from 72 to 68 beats per minute, and the BP decreased from 120/80 to 110/70 mmHg. The control group showed no significant changes in HR and BP. The results suggest that a 10-week training program can effectively reduce the HR and BP of sedentary, middle-aged men.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and blood pressure (BP) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The control group consisted of 10 men who did not participate in any physical activity during the study. The training group consisted of 10 men who participated in a 10-week training program. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions were performed on a stationary bike at a heart rate of 150 beats per minute. The HR and BP were measured at the beginning and end of the study. The results showed that the training group had a significant decrease in HR and BP compared to the control group. The HR of the training group decreased from 170 beats per minute to 150 beats per minute, and the BP decreased from 140 mmHg to 120 mmHg. The HR of the control group remained at 170 beats per minute, and the BP remained at 140 mmHg. These results suggest that a 10-week training program can effectively reduce HR and BP in sedentary, middle-aged men.
